Utilitarianism $ J.S. Mill [04] last time 0001 0002
      last time we began to consider some objections 0003 to Jeremy Bentham's version 0004 of utilitarianism 0005
      people raised two objections in the discussion 0006 we had the first 0007 0008
      was the objection, the claim 0009 that utilitarianism, 0010
      by concerning itself 0011 with the greatest good for the greatest number 0012 fails adequately to respect 0013 individual rights.
0014 today we have debates 0015
      about torture 0016 and terrorism 0017
      suppose 0018 a suspected terrorists was apprehended on September tenth 0019
      and you had reason to believe 0020 that the suspect 0021 had crucial information about an impending terrorist attack that would kill over three thousand 0022 people 0023 and you couldn't extract the information 0024 would it be just 0025 to torture 0026 the suspect 0027 to get the information 0028 or 0029 do you say no
      there is a categorical moral duty of respect for individual rights 0030 in a way we're back to the questions we started with t 0031 0032
      about trolley cars and organ transplants so that's the first issue 0033
      and you remember we considered some examples of cost-benefit analysis 0034 but a lot of people were unhappy with cost-benefit analysis 0035
     when it came to placing a dollar value on human life
```

```
0036 and so that led us to the 0037
      second objection,
      it questioned whether it's possible to translate all values 0038 into a single uniform measure of value 0039 it asks in other words whether all values are commensurable 0040 0041 let me give you one other 0042 example of an experience, this actually is a true story, it comes from personal experience 0043 0044 that raises a question at least about whether all values can be translated without 0045 loss 0046 into utilitarian terms 0047
      some years ago 0048 when I was a graduate student I was at Oxford in England and they had men's and women's 0049 colleges they weren't yet mixed 0050 and the women's colleges had rules 0051 against overnight male guests 0052
0053
      by the nineteen seventies these 0054
      rules were rarely enforced and easily violated, 0055 or so I was told, by the late nineteen seventies when I was there, pressure grew to relax these rules and it became 0056 0057 the subject of debate among the faculty at St. Anne's College 0058 which was one of these all women colleges 0059
      the older women on the faculty 0060 we're traditionalists they were opposed to change 0061 on conventional moral grounds 0062 but times had changed 0063
      and they were embarrassed 0064 to give the true grounds of their objection 0065
      and so the translated their arguments 0066 into utilitarian terms 0067
      if men stay overnight, 0068
      they argued, the costs to the college will increase.
0069
      how you might wonder 0070 well they'll want to take baths, and that will use up hot water they said furthermore they argued 0071 0072
     we'll have to replace the mattresses more often
```

```
0073
      the reformers 0074
      met these arguments by adopting the following compromise 0075
      each woman
      could have a maximum of three overnight male guest each week 0076 they didn't say whether it had to be the same one, or three different 0077 0078 provided and this is the compromise provided 0079 0080
      the guest 0081 paid fifty pence to defray the cost to the college 0082 the next day 0083 the national headline in the national newspaper read St. Anne's girls, fifty pence a night 0084
      another 0085 illustration 0086 of the difficulty of translating 0087
      all values 0088 in this case a certain idea of virtue 0089
      into utilitarian terms
      so that's all to illustrate 0090 0091 the second objection
      to utilitarianism, at least the part of that objection 0092 0093 that questions rather 0094
      the utilitarianism 0095 is right to assume 0096 that we can 0097 assume the uniformity of 0098 value, the commensurability of values and translate all moral considerations 0099 into 0100 dollars 0101 or money.
0102
      But there is a second 0103 aspect to this worry about aggregating values and preferences 0104 why should we 0105 weigh 0106
     all preferences 0107 that people have without assessing whether they're good preferences or bad preferences 0108 0109 shouldn't we distinguish
```

```
0110 between 0111 higher pleasures 0112
      and lower pleasures.
0113
      Now, part of the appeal of 0114 not making any qualitative distinctions about the worth of people's preferences, part of the 0115 0116 appeal 0117
      is that it is non-judgmental and egalitarian 0118
      the Benthamite utilitarian says everybody's preferences count 0119 0120
      and they count regardless of what people want 0121 regardless of what makes it different people
      happy. For Bentham, 0122
0123 all that matters 0124 you'll remember 0125 are the intensity and the duration of a pleasure or pain 0126
      the so-called higher pleasures or nobler virtues are simply those, according to Bentham 0127 that produce 0128 0129 stronger, 0130 longer, pleasure 0131
     yet a famous phrase to express this idea
      the quantity of pleasure being equal 0132 0133
      pushpin 0134 is as good as poetry.
0135
     What was pushpin?
0136
      It was some kind of a child's game like to tidily winks pushpin is as good as poetry 0137
      Bentham said 0138 and lying behind this idea 0139
     I think 0140 is the claim 0141
     the intuition 0142 that it's a presumption 0143
     to judge 0144 whose pleasures
     are intrinsically higher 0145
0146 or worthier or better
```

```
0147 and there is something attractive in this refusal to judge, after all some people like 0148 Mozart, others
0149 0150 Madonna 0151
      some people like ballet others 0152 0153
      bowling, 0154
     who's to say 0155 a Benthamite might argue, who's to say which of these pleasures 0156
     whose pleasures 0157 are higher 0158 worthier 0159
      nobler 0160
     than others?
0161
      But, is that right?
      this refusal to make qualitative distinctions 0162 0163
      can we 0164 altogether dispense with the idea 0165 that certain things we take pleasure in are better or worthier 0166 0167
      than others
      think back to the case of the Romans in the coliseum, one thing that troubled people about that 0168
0169 practice
      is that it seemed to violate the rights 0170 of the Christian 0171 0172
      another way of objecting to what's going on there 0173 is that the pleasure that the Romans take 0174
      in this bloody spectacle 0175 should that pleasure 0176 which is a base, 0177
      kind of corrupt 0178 degrading pleasure, should that even 0179 be valorized or weighed in deciding what the 0180
     the general welfare is?
0181
      so here are the objections to Bentham's utilitarianism and now we turn to someone who tried to 0182 0183 respond to those objections,
```

| 0184 | a later day utilitarian |
|------|--|
| 0185 | John Stuart Mill |
| 0186 | so what we need to |
| 0187 | examine now |
| 0188 | is whether John Stuart Mill had a convincing reply |
| 0189 | to these objections to utilitarianism. |
| 0190 | John Stuart Mill |
| 0191 | was born in 1806 |
| 0192 | his father James Mill |
| 0193 | was a disciple of Bentham's |
| 0194 | and James Mills set about giving his son |
| 0195 | John Stuart Mill a model education |
| 0196 | he was a child prodigy |
| 0197 | John Stuart Mill |
| 0198 | the knew Latin, sorry, Greek at the age of three, Latin at eight |
| 0199 | and at age ten |
| 0200 | he wrote a history of Roman law. |
| 0201 | At age twenty |
| 0202 | he had a nervous breakdown |
| 0203 | this left him in a depression for five years |
| 0204 | but at age twenty five what helped lift him out of this depression |
| 0205 | is that he met Harriet Taylor |
| 0206 | she in no doubt married him, they lived happily ever after |
| 0207 | and it was under her |
| 0208 | influence |
| 0209 | the John Stuart Mill try to humanize |
| 0210 | utilitarianism |
| 0211 | what Mill tried to do was to see |
| 0212 | whether the utilitarian calculus could be |
| 0213 | enlarged |
| 0214 | and modified |
| 0215 | to accommodate |
| 0216 | humanitarian concerns |
| 0217 | like the concern to respect individual rights |
| 0218 | and also to address the distinction between higher and lower |
| 0219 | pleasures. |
| 0220 | In 1859 Mill wrote a famous book on liberty |

```
the main point of which was the importance of defending individual rights and minority 0221 rights 0222 and in 1861 0223 toward the end of his life 0224
      he wrote the book we read is part of this course 0225
0226 Utilitarianism.
0227
      It makes it clear 0228 that utility is the only standard of morality 0229 in his view 0230
      so he's not challenging 0231 Bentham's premise,
      he's affirming it.
0232
      he says very explicitly the sole evidence, 0233 it is possible to produce that anything is desirable is that people actually do 0234 desire it.
0235
      so he stays with the idea that our de facto actual empirical desires are the only 0236 0237 basis
      for moral judgment.
0238
      but then 0239 0240
      page eight
      also in chapter two, he argues that it is possible for a utilitarian to distinguish 0241 0242 higher from lower 0243 pleasures.
0244
      now, those of you who've read 0245 Mill already 0246 how 0247 according to him is it possible to draw that distinction?
0248
      How can a utilitarian 0249 distinguish qualitatively higher pleasures 0250 from 0251
      lesser ones, base ones, unworthy ones?
0252
      If you tried both of them 0253 and you'll prefer the higher one naturally always 0254 that's great, that's right. What's your name? John.
0255
     so as John points out Mill says here's the test, 0256
0257 since we can't step outside
```

```
0258
      actual desires, actual preferences 0259 that would violate utilitarian premises, 0260
      the only test 0261 of whether 0262
0263
      a pleasure is higher 0264 or lower is whether someone who has experienced both 0265 would prefer it.
0266
      And here, 0267 in chapter two we see the passage 0268 where Mill makes the point that John just described 0269 of two pleasures, if there be one to which all are almost all who have experience 0270
      of both give a decided preference, 0271 0272 irrespective of any feeling of moral obligation to prefer it, in other words no outside, no independent 0273 standard,
      then that is the more desirable pleasure.
0274
      what do people think about that argument.
0275 does that 0276
      does it succeeded?
0277
      how many think that it does succeed?
0278 0279
      of arguing within utilitarian terms for a distinction between higher and lower pleasures.
0280 how many 0281 think it doesn't succeed?
0282
      I want to hear your reasons.
0283
      but before 0284
      we give the reasons 0285
      let's do an experiment of Mills' 0286 0287
      claim.
0288
      In order to do this experiment 0289 we're going to look that three 0290 short excerpts 0291 of popular entertainment 0292
      the first one is a Hamlet soliloguy 0293 it'll be followed by two other
```

```
0294 experiences 0295 see what you think.
      'what a piece of work is a man 0296 how noble in reason 0297
      how infinite in faculties 0298
      in form and moving, how express and admirable 0299 0300 in action how like an angel. In apprehension, how like a god 0301
      the beauty of the world 0302 the paragon of animals
      and yet, to me 0303
      what is this quintessence of dust?
0304
      man delights not me.
0305
      Imagine a world where your greatest fears become reality 0306 each show, six contestants from around the country battle each other in three 0307 extreme stunts. these stunts are designed to challenge these contestants both physically and mentally 0308
      six contestants, three stunts, one winner.
0309 Fear factor.
0310
      The Simpsons. Well hi diddly-o peddle to the metal o-philes! Flanders- since when do you like anything 0311
cool
      well, I don't care for the speed, but I can't get enough of that safety gear 0312 0313 helmets, roll bars, caution flags. I like the fresh air 0314
      and looking at the poor people in the infield.
0315
      Dang Cletus, why you got to park by my parents.
0316
      Now hunny, it's my parents too.
0317
      I don't even have to ask which one you like most 0318
      the Simpsons? How many like the Simpson's most?
0319
      How many Shakespeare?
0320
      What about fear factor?
0321
      how many preferred fear factor?
0322 really?
0323 people overwhelmingly 0324 like the Simpsons 0325 better than Shakespeare. alright, now let's take the other 0326 0327 part of the poll which is the 0328 0329 highest 0330 experience or pleasure?
```

```
0331 how many say 0332 Shakespeare?
0333
      how many say
      fear factor?
0334 0335 no you can't be serious 0336
      really?
0337
      alright go ahead you can say it.
0338
      I found that one 0339 the most entertaining
      I know but which do you think was the worthiest, the noblest experience, I know you find it 0340 the most anything 0341 if something is good just because it is pleasurable what is the matter if you have some kind of 0342 abstract 0343 idea of whether it is good by someone else's sense or not.
0344
      Alright so you come down on the straight Benthamite's side 0345 0346
      whose to judge 0347 and why should we judge
      apart from just registering and aggregating de facto preferences, alright fair enough.
0348
0349
      what's your name?
0350
      Nate? okay fair enough
0351 Alright so 0352
      how many think that the Simpson's is actually 0353 apart from liking is actually the higher experience 0354 higher than Shakespeare.
0355
      Alright let's see the vote for Shakespeare again 0356
      how many think Shakespeare is higher?
0357
      alright so 0358
     why is it 0359 ideally I'd like to hear from someone is there someone 0360 think Shakespeare is highest 0361 but who preferred 0362 watching 0363
     the Simpsons
     Like I guess just sitting and watching the Simpsons, it's entertaining because the make jokes, they 0364 make us laugh but 0365 someone has to tell us that Shakespeare was this great writer we had to be taught how to read him, how to 0366 understand him, we had to be taught how to take in Rembrandt, how to analyze a painting.
```

```
0367
      well how do, what's your name? Aneesha.
0368
0369 Aneesha, when you say someone told you that Shakespeare's better 0370 are you accepting it on blind faith you voted that Shakespeare's higher only because the culture 0371 0372 tells you that our teachers tell you that or do you 0373 actually agree with that yourself 0374 well in the sense that Shakespeare, no, but earlier you made 0375 an example of Rembrandt 0376
      I feel like I would enjoy a reading a comic book more than I would enjoy a kind of analyzing 0377 Rembrandt because someone told me it was great, you know. Right so of some this seems to be, you're suggesting a kind of 0378 0379 cultural convention and pressure. We're told what books, what works of art are great. who else?
0380
      although I enjoyed watching the Simpsons more in this particular moment in Justice, 0381
      if I were to spend the rest of my life considering 0382 the three different 0383 video clips shown 0384 0385
      I would not want to spend 0386 that remainder of my life considering 0387 the latter two clips.
0388
      I think I would derive more pleasure 0389 from being able to 0390 branch out in my own mind 0391 sort of 0392 considering more deep pleasures, more deep thoughts.
0393 and tell me your name 0394 Joe.
0395
      Joe, so if you had to spend the rest of your life on 0396 on a farm in Kansas with only 0397 with only Shakespeare 0398 or the collected episodes of the Simpsons 0399
      you would prefer 0400 Shakespeare 0401 what do you conclude from that about John Stuart Mill's test 0402 0403
     but the test of a higher pleasure
```

```
0404 is whether people who have experienced 0405
      both prefer it.
0406 can I cite another example briefly?
0407 0408
      in biology
      in neuro biology last year we were told of a rat who was tested 0409
0410
      a particular center in the brain
      where the rat was able to stimulate its brain and cause itself intense pleasure repeatedly 0411
0412
      the rat did not eat or drink until it died 0413
      so the rat was clearly experiencing intense pleasure 0414 now if you asked me right now if I'd rather experience intense pleasure 0415 or have a full lifetime of higher pleasure, I would consider intense pleasure to be lower pleasure, right 0416
0417
      now enjoy intense pleasure
     yes I would 0418 0419
      but over a lifetime I think 0420
      I would think
      almost a complete majority here would agree 0421 that they would rather be a human with higher pleasure that rat 0422 0423
      with intense pleasure 0424 for a momentary period of time 0425 so now 0426
      in answer to your question, right, I think this proves that, or I won't say proves 0427
0428
      I think the conclusion 0429 is that Mill's theory that when a majority people are asked 0430 what they would rather do, 0431
      they will answer 0432 that they would rather 0433 engage in a higher pleasure. So you think that this supports Mills, that Mills was on to something here 0434
      I do.
0435
      all right is there anyone 0436 who disagrees with Joe who thinks that our experiment 0437 disproves 0438 Mills' 0439 test
```

```
shows that that's not an adequate way 0440 that you can't distinguish higher pleasures within the utilitarian 0441 framework.
0442
      If whatever is good is truly just whatever people prefer it's truly relative and there's 0443 no objective definition then 0444 0445
      there will be some society where people prefer Simpsons 0446 more anyone can appreciate the Simpsons, but I think it does take education to appreciate Shakespeare 0447 0448
      Alright, you're saying it takes education to appreciate higher 0449 true thing Mill's point is 0450 0451 that the higher pleasures do require 0452 cultivation and appreciation and education he doesn't dispute that 0453 0454
      but 0455
      once having been cultivated 0456
      and educated people will see 0457 not only see the difference between higher lower 0458 0459
      pleasures
      but will it actually 0460 0461 prefer the higher 0462 0463
      to the lower.
0464
      you find this famous passage from John Stuart Mill-0465 it is better 0466 to be a human being dissatisfied 0467
      then a pig satisfied.
0468 Better to the Socrates dissatisfied than a fool satisfied and if the fool 0469 0470 or the pig 0471 are of a different opinion 0472 it is because they only know 0473 their side of the question.
0474
      so here you have 0475 an attempt 0476
     to distinguish
```

```
higher from lower 0477 0478
      pleasures
      so going to an art museum or being a couch potato, swilling beer watching television 0479 0480
      at home
      sometimes Mill agrees we might succumb 0481 0482 to the temptation 0483 to do the latter, 0484
      to be couch potatoes, 0485 but even when we do that 0486 out of indolence 0487 and sloth, 0488
      we know 0489 that the pleasure we get gazing at Rembrandts 0490 in the museum 0491
      is actually higher, 0492 0493
      because we've experienced both.
      And is a higher pressure 0494 0495 gazing at Rembrandts 0496 because of engages our higher human faculties 0497 what about Mill's attempt 0498
      to reply to the objection about individual rights?
0499
      In a way he uses the same 0500 kind of argument 0501 and this comes out in chapter five 0502
      he says while I dispute the pretensions of any theory which sets up an imaginary standard 0503
      of justice 0504
      not grounded on utility, 0505
      but still 0506 he considers 0507 justice 0508 grounded on utility to be what he calls the chief part 0509
      and incomparably the most sacred and binding part 0510 of all morality.
0511
      so justice is higher 0512 individual rights are privileged 0513 but not for
```

```
reasons that depart from utilitarian assumptions.
0514
0515
      Justice is a name 0516
      for certain moral requirements 0517
      which, regarded collectively 0518 stand higher in the scale of social utility 0519 and are therefore of more 0520 0521 paramount obligation 0522
      than any others 0523 so justice is sacred, it's prior, it's privileged, it isn't something that can easily be traded 0524 off against lesser things 0525
      but the reason 0526 is ultimately Mills Claims
0527 0528
      a utilitarian reason 0529 once you consider 0530
     the long run interests 0531 of humankind, 0532
      of all of us, 0533 as progressive 0534 beings.
      If we do justice and if we respect rights
0535 0536 society as a whole
      will be better off in the long run.
0537 0538
     Well is that convincing?
0539 0540 is Mill actually, without admitting it, stepping outside 0541 utilitarian considerations 0542
      in arguing 0543 for qualitatively higher 0544 pleasures 0545 and for sacred 0546 or specially important 0547 individual rights?
0548
      we haven't fully answered that question 0549 because to answer that question 0550 in the case of rights and justice
```

```
0551 will require that we explore 0552
      other ways, 0553 non utilitarian ways of accounting for the basis 0554 0555
      or rights 0556 and then asking 0557 whether they succeed 0558
      as for Jeremy Bentham, 0559
      who launched 0560 utilitarianism 0561 as a doctrine 0562
      in moral and legal philosophy 0563
      Bentham died in 1832 at the age of eighty five 0564
      but if you go to London you can visit him today 0565 literally.
0566
      he provided in his will 0567 that his body be preserved, 0568
      embalmed and displayed in the university of London 0569 0570
      where he still presides in a glass case 0571
      with a wax head 0572 dressed in his actual clothing.
0573
      you see before he died, 0574
      Bentham addressed himself to a question consistent with his philosophy, 0575
      of what use 0576 could a dead man be to the living 0577 one use, he said, would be to make one's corpse available 0578 for the study of anatomy 0579
      in the case of great philosophers, however, 0580 better yet 0581
      to preserve one's physical presence in order to inspire future generations of thinkers.
0582
      You want to see what Bentham looks like stuffed?
0583 Here's what he looks like 0584
      There he is 0585
      now, if you look closely 0586
      you'll notice 0587 that
```

```
0588
      the embalming up his actual had was not a success so they substituted a waxed head 0589 and at the bottom for verisimilitude
      you can actually see his actual had 0590 on a plate 0591 0592
      you see it?
      right there 0593 0594
      so, what's the moral of the story?
      the moral of the story 0595 0596 by the way they bring him out during meetings of the board at university college London 0597
      and the minutes record him as present but not voting.
      here is a philosopher 0598 0599
      in life and in death who adhered 0600 0601 to the principles
```

of his philosophy. we'll continue with rights next time.
